Gentlemen Like Vehicles

In Hakone Mountains, there are people who ride in sedan chairs, people who bear sedan chairs, people who make straw sandals for bearers of sedan chairs, and people who collect removed straw sandals. There are so many different people in our life drama. Now after all, the position of people who “ride” is more enjoyable than that of people who “bear”. But what are vehicles for riding? There can be some problems about this.

Jean, who rode a honeymoon train, felt as if he were on cloud nine. Next to him, a pretty bride was sitting quietly. When he thought about the night of that day, he fidgeted and smiled and the voices of others couldn't reach his ears. There came the conductor to examine tickets and said, “Excuse me, but I'd like to see your tickets.”

Jean maybe mistook something as he took the marriage registration out of the pocket of his suit and said, “Here you are.” The conductor gazed hard at it and said, “With this ticket you can ride as many times as you like, but not this train.”

Journeys in the train are rather tiresome unless on honeymoon. We invite, therefore, a passenger sitting on the opposite seat and shoot the breeze. However, Mr. Numa, who had given big yarns, spoke to a man opposite to him, "How tiresome we are! How about a cigarette? When Mr. Numa held out a cigarette, the gentleman waved his hand and said, "Sorry, I don't smoke. I'm afraid of lung cancer, thanks." Consequently, Mr. Numa took out a little bottle of whiskey, saying, "How about a drink of this?" "I don't drink alcohol. Many thanks. I'm afraid of heart disease." Just at that time, Mrs. Numa, who was sleeping on the next seat, was awoken. Then Mr. Numa said, "I've delayed to introduce her, But this is my wife." The gentleman waved his hand again, "I don't do that, either, as I'm afraid of venereal diseases...."

Talking about the same long journey, voyages aboard the ship have special emotions. In the first class cabin, there are gorgeous beds and they say, "Show me your cute vessel, please, and ride on board the vessel on board the ship. This cannot be allowed aboard the jet plane.

On his first voyage Sam suffered from a heavy sea sickness. The ship continued to sway again and again all night. He was beside himself with fear. Next morning, he went up to the deck and found that the weather was fine with calm waves. Sam said to the captain passing by, "As if last night was a lie!" "What becomes of you?" "Last night, we had a hideous storm! The ship pitched and rolled tremendously...." "No, the sea was calm. But about two hundred couples in honeymoon are aboard this ship."

No, this is not a laughing matter. Sea sickness is indeed agonizing. But in France, there is a superstition which goes; “Those who fall in love do not get sea sick.”

“My love, Marie, let’s go honeymoon by ship!” “I’m worried about sea sickness.” “But they say those who are in love don’t get sea sick.” “Yes, they do. But I’m worried about the return journey.”

Sailors who don’t mind a pin about the sea sickness are scary of sea storms.

Here is a sea port town. A woman in the street called out to a dandy sailor man. “Do you wanna play? A thousand francs for the calm. A thousand and a half francs for the storm. Two thousand francs for the typhoon.” The sailor paid a thousand francs. “Hey, move a little.” “Because of the calm, no move.” “Then do the storm.” The sailor man felt very good at her moderate waist movement and said, “Good. Do the typhoon in addition. By Jove! Too much violent shaking. The mast came off carelessly.... Suddenly the woman cried, “Oh! You! That’s not the right place. Not right.” But the sailor didn’t mind a straw, “Shut up! When the storm is coming, I stick it into any port.”
